On My Mind
Rev. Gary Kowalski

Just over a month ago Hamas launched a surprise attack on Israeli settlers shocking in its brutality. Hundreds including women, children and the elderly were taken hostage as missiles rained down on Israeli cities. Casualties were in the thousands. The following day, Israeli Defense Forces began a bombardment of Gaza that has killed many more thousands, burying civilians with no place to flee beneath the rubble of a ruined city starved for potable water, electricity, food and medical supplies. The cost in suffering has been enormous.

The roots of this conflict are ancient, as people of different faiths and ethnicities (Jewish, Palestinian, Muslim, Christian, Druze, Bahai, and more) struggle to live side by side on a small piece of real estate that three major world religions claim as holy ground.

Warfare is not the answer, for while religious extremists espouse violence, the core teaching of all great faiths counsels a peaceful co-existence for the world's peoples founded on justice and mutual respect.

For hostilities to cease, the Palestinian people need a path toward an unoccupied homeland, with viable borders and self-determination. Israelis need security and an assurance that their neighbors are willing to accept the permanent presence of a Jewish state.

The Hebrew Bible envisions a time when swords will be beaten into plowshares, when each shall live beneath their own vine or fig tree, and none shall make them afraid. It is time for world leaders to step back from the precipice of wider war and begin a process of reconciliation that will end the bloodshed and bring about just and lasting peace. — Gary

Aloha and Adios
Rev. Gary Kowalski

Sunday, December 3, 11 a.m.

Our minister of the last eight years, Reverend Gary Kowalski, will deliver his final address this morning, a meditation on the crucial phrases (Hello, Goodbye, Thank You, and I'm Sorry) that we need to be savvy travelers through the world and through life.

Holy, Holy, Holy
Rev. Munro Sickafoose

Sunday, December 17, 11 a.m.

This time of year calls us inward. What do we hold sacred? What do we revere and have reverence for? These questions are for each of us... and all of us. All we have to do is ask.

Christmas Eve
Rev. Jeanne Montclair
Sunday, December 24, 11 a.m.

Christmas has been called the most magical time of the year. Yet some of us dread it; the ostracism of religiosity, the commercialism, the expectations, the troubling expenses, and the deepening of Winter. As we tune in — or tune out — to the Christmas fervor, let us listen to the advice of two well-known Jewish men: Jesus, who said, "Love your neighbor as yourself" which is great IF you do love yourself. And not such great advice if you have learned not to. Here, let's incorporate the words of Leonard Cohen, who reminds us there is still beauty, and the sacred, in our imperfection when he says: "Ring the bells that still can ring. Forget your perfect offering. There is a crack, a crack in everything. That's how the light gets in." Let's let the light of this joyful season into our hearts this Christmas.

Burning Bowl Ritual

Donna Collins

Sunday, December 31, 11 a.m.

The new year calls us forward, filled with mystery. As we turn toward 2024, we take a final glimpse of the past year and reckon with all that it held for us. What parts of our lives — what things, ideas, people, ways of living — have become obstacles to our becoming the people we want to be, the people we need to be? What's holding you back? What's getting in the way of your living as fully as you'd like to? What might you burn away from your current life? What will you relinquish?

SHARING CIRCLES

Beauty

December 10, 11 a.m.

"I don't think of the misery but of the beauty that still remains." — Anne Frank

"Beauty in things exists in the mind which contemplates them." — David Hume

Beauty is one of the foundational values, in the same category as truth and goodness. Many philosophers believe that beauty pervades the natural world and extends to the farthest reaches of the cosmos. Aesthetics is a branch of philosophy, devoted entirely to the study of the beautiful. But today, we'll bring it down to the personal.

Do you have an object you love simply for its beauty? If so, please bring it to the circle and share with us what it means to you. How did it make its way into your hands? How does it make you feel when you look at, use, or interact with it? If it's too large to bring, you could photograph it and bring the photo. If it's lost or gone, perhaps you could just tell us about it.

Open Topic Sharing Circle

December 24, 11 a.m.

The Open Topic Sharing Circle falls on Christmas Eve this month, so in lieu of the circle, we'll celebrate the season by having a Christmas Eve morning service instead. See the flip side of this newsletter.

In early October, the opening concert of the Taos Chamber Music Group featured percussionist Douglas Cardwell playing the Varied Trio of Lou Harrison with Elizabeth Baker on violin and Vicki Ray on piano. Listen to the 1987 premier in Singapore (20 minutes).

Douglas Cardwell, former principal timpanist of the New Mexico Symphony orchestra, has a percussion studio in Albuquerque, where fine instruments are available as well as percussion classes with a staff trained by Cardwell. For background and a 2021 Santa Fe Youth Symphony Masterclass by Douglas Cardwell, listen here.

Researching this article led to a remarkable 1780 piece by Johan Carl Fischer for eight timpani and orchestra, performed by the Venezuelan Simón Bolívar Symphony Orchestra June 2020 Symphony with 8 Obligato Timpani (14 minutes). Diego Montes (19 y.o.) is the timpanist. And then, Douglas Cardwell playing the timpani cadenza of the Fischer Symphony without orchestra, a 2016 recording.

If you are curious about the timpani, check out this comprehensive note.

Sack Lunches for the Men's Shelter

Sunday, December 17

After the service on December 17, we'll be assembling lunches for the Men's Shelter. Please sign up for what you'd like to bring using Signup Genius. The link will be in UCOT's weekly email and the online newsletter. We will set up the assembly line to put them together immediately following the service. The shelter has requested that we only bring 24 bags, so it will only take a few minutes and it's fun! The men are very appreciative. Please email Annette Rubin with questions: rubin.annette@gmail.com. Thank you for your kind assistance.

UCOT Book Group
Thursday, December 28, 10:30 a.m., SOMOS

In a nod to both a busy holiday season and a very long book, the UCOT book group will read The Covenant of Water, by Abraham Verghese, over two months, December 2023 and January 2024.

Please read through Part 4 for the December meeting on December 28 and the balance of the book for January 25.

Spanning the years 1900 to 1977, The Covenant of Water is set in Kerala, on South India's Malabar Coast, and follows three generations of a family. At the turn of the century, a twelve-year-old girl from Kerala's long-existing Christian community, grieving the death of her father, is sent by boat to her wedding, where she will meet her forty-year-old husband for the first time.

A shimmering evocation of a bygone India and of the passage of time itself, The Covenant of Water is a hymn to progress in medicine and to human understanding, as well as a humbling testament to the difficulties undergone by past generations for the sake of those alive today. It is one of the most masterful literary novels published in recent years.

Lay Leader Training
December 17

UCOT will be holding a Lay Leader training for those interested in Lay Leading for 2024. The only requirement for participating as a Lay Leader is being a member of UCOT.

The training will take place immediately after the Sunday, December 17th service, and will be conducted by Mya Coursey. The training should not last more than 1 hour. Snacks will be provided.

If you are a current Lay Leader who wishes to continue to LayLead in 2024, or you are a newcomer to Lay Leading and are interested being a part of the team, please plan to attend this training!

For more information, or if you have any questions, please contact Joe Mazza using this email address: joem.mazza@gmail.com. Also, please contact him if you are planning to attend. Thank you!
